P&O Cruises partners with Jamie Laing's Candy Kittens confectionery brand to make cruising that little bit sweeter

(March 28, 2024)

P&O Cruises has announced its partnership with gourmet confectionery brand, Candy Kittens, to offer vegan treats to guests to satisfy their sweet cravings whilst on holiday.

The sweets, created by Jamie Laing and Ed Williams with the mission to offer 100% plantpowered indulgence, made their ocean debut onboard Iona earlier this month, with products available across the rest of the ships by the end of April. The range, which includes firm favourite flavours Eton Mess, Sour Watermelon, Shox Gourmet Sours and Wild Strawberry is perfect for enjoying onboard or gifting.

"I'm super excited that Candy Kittens is set to board P&O Cruises ships - with all our flavours being plant-powered, they are something everyone can enjoy! Having had the pleasure of recently taking a P&O Cruises trip myself, it feels all the more special." said Jamie Laing

Guests will be able to enjoy tasting events and pop up sweet shops as part of the onboard activity programme.

About Candy Kittens

London-based Candy Kittens was founded in 2012 after Jamie Laing and Ed Williams threw out the confectionery rulebook and created a brand specifically for grown-ups, free from rules and free from compromise. Now a cult favourite, thanks to its conscientious, stylised vegan product line that tastes as good as it looks, Candy Kittens offers eight irresistible flavours.

While Candy Kittens doesn't take itself too seriously, it is serious about making conscious choices and helping customers do the same. The purpose-led brand sources honest ingredients with no nasties. No gelatine. No palm oil. No fake stuff. Instead, they've made a commitment to do good – for people and our planet. Their range is 100% plant powered and 100% irresistible.

Candy Kittens is on a mission to build a community that sees sweets differently. They're the 'No Nasties. All Good' brand challenging the rest of the sweets industry to ditch the gelatine and do better!
